STRANGE SHOOTING STORY

in Cincinnati Hospital

At Addyston, just below Cincinnati, Thomas Jordan was shot, dying soon after.

When the neighbors came in they found hi sixteen-year-old wife calmly washing her hands from three bullet wounds in her own body.

It was at first thought she had killed her huster being taken to the Betts Street Hospital she told this story to Dr. Broerman, the attending physician-

"I am from Vanceburg, Ky., and my name is Rebecca McCally. My father is J. T. McCally of Vanceburg. I have been married about eight months, and we lived for a time at Vanceburg. I quarreled with my husband there and this suit. for a time we lived apart. He came to Coal City to work and I followed. Friday morning I told him I was not going to live with him any longer, and we argued about the matter. I was sitting on the side of the bed, and he said, 'You'd better stay with me, or you'll be sorry.' The next thing I remember is his coming toward me with a gun he had bought several days ago, and which he had threatened then to use on me. I don't remember much after that. I remember vaguely that I was lying on the bed sort of dased, and a man we call 'Curly' said 'Don't let him get the gun again.' I remember picking up the gun, which was by the bed, and pitching it toward the door. I remember some one saying that my husband was shot, and that he shot himself. I think a Doctor told me that, body wanted to ask questions."

The authorities were for a time firm in the belief that Mrs. Jordan had shot her husband and then herself, but later developments have caused a change of opinion.

At last accounts she was in a critical condi- go at 49c.

Leprosy is increasing in both North and South America. Colombia, where there were only 400. lepers forty years ago, is said to have 46,000 now and many find their way into the United States. Such a medical authority as Dr. Ashmead, who was formerly chief medical adviser to the Government of Japan, says the increase is alarming. When leprosy is brought into a new country it takes fifty years for the seeds to take root, and it becomes epidemic after some 200 years. It has been shown that mosquitoes are active in transferring leprosy bacilli.
